GAC GRADING SYSTEM

We use a grading system based on the expected production of the players. The point system is determined by the expectancy of our players in each of the major elements in a game. The system has weaknesses as we do not have the man-power or an effective way to measure certain defensive factors. Obviously, the players who get most of the playing time should grade higher. However, if a player has short intervals of play and doesn't produce some "plus" games, he is not as likely to be productive. Also, this system is weighted toward the inside players due to the large amount of rebounds that are possible and the lower ball-handling risks for turnovers.

We tend to use our system to compare players at the same positions. At times we may need better ball-handling skills, better rebounding, scoring or other help which would override a comparison of grades.

For the players who are starters or play most of the game, we feel that a +10 is an average score. As you see the individual scores you will note a large discrepancy in various players. Over a number of games a pattern will develop in grading players which is an indication of what to expect with certain players and certain positions.

The opportunity to get early playing time is spelled out in the brochures which were handed out at our first organizational meeting. When a team is successful, not much change of starters or playing time occurs. But when a team is struggling, we are continually looking for a player or a combination which will improve our team.

The following factors determine our grading system. Again, a +10 is considered average.

GACS Grading System

Field Goals

Expectancy: 1 of 2 atts = +1; 1 of 1 atts = +1½

0 of 1 atts = -½; 0 of 2 atts = -1
